

CONFERENCE SAILS INTO SMOOTHER SEAS, IT APPEARS

Tension Eased by Agreement of Britain to Pay
$10,000,000

DEBTS NOT SETTLED

Belief Is That Great Britain
Hopes for Cancellation

(By International News Service)

GEOLOGICAL MUSEUM, LONDON, Eng., June 15.—The World Economic Conference sailed into less turbulent seas today on the heels of the British debt adjustment, but it is recognized on all sides that there are still breakers ahead.

The tension has merely been eased temporarily by the agreement under which Britain pays $10,000,000 in silver as an acknowledgment of her debt installment. There is no indication that the British press and public regard the Baldwin debt agreement as completely dead and that they expect forthcoming Washington "conversations" to result either in cancellation or a final settlement of the Lausanne dime-on-a-dollar basis.

The significance of the "token" payment, which amounted roughly to one tenth of the amount due, is not lost on Americans here. It means the British government is determined to drive the Lausanne principles through the Washington talks.

London celebrated the "debt victory" far into the night. Extra editions of newspapers were snatched up by hilarious crowds and restaurant orchestras played "Brother, Can You Spare A Dime."

The conference today entered its fourth and final day of oratory after which it will split into three main committees dealing with economic matters, monetary standards and tariffs.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 15.—The semi-annual installment on foreign debts owed by European nations to the United States fell due today. Great Britain announced payment of $10,000,000 in silver as an acknowledgment of the $75,950,000 due. France and Belgium indicated their intentions of again defaulting.

Part payments will bring America's receipt to ten per cent of the $143,000,000 due.

The debt situation overshadowed deliberations of the World Economic Conference where oratory held sway.

Maxim Letvinoff, Soviet conference commissar made a bold bid to recapture British trade by submitting to Premier MacDonald a proposal for world-wide abolition of all discriminating tariffs and trade boycotts such as that imposed by Britain against Russia.

Prime Minister Bennett of Canada demanded immediate stabilization of the dollar as absolutely necessary to the success of the conference.

OH! FOR ANOTHER CHANCE!

(By "The Stroller")

To have in one's possession a certificate that at one specific time was worth $25,000, and 60 days later became valueless is the height of irony.

Such a certificate is in the hands of Mrs. Emma Lovett, Bristol Township, which entitled her mother, the late Mrs. Caroline Winder, to $25,000 during the World's Fair in St. Louis, Mo., known as the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, 1904-1905.

A contest was conducted at the start of the said fair, any individual being privileged to estimate on the number they believed would attend the gigantic affair. The late Mrs. Winder estimated 19,000,000, and at the close of the fair the number judged by her was found to be exactly correct. Her certificate, giving her earlier estimate, informed her she would receive $25,000. Other lesser prizes together with the first prize totaled $75,000.

The first prize winner was required to go to the fair site and claim the award. Others were to be paid at the fair or through any recognized bank, according to their choice.

All health prevented the late resident of Bristol Township from going to Missouri to claim the fortune, and no other member of the family making the journey to receive the sum, the certificate became void 60 days after the contest's close.

The vote was cast by Mrs. Winder on February 6, 1904, and being a mighty good guesser she was exactly right. There were 1889 cash prizes of which the local woman's was first.

The certificate as well as newspaper clippings and letter informing the prize winner of her good fortune are now in possession of her daughter, Mrs. Lovett.

BLUE LAW MODIFIERS HAVE FIRST VICTORY

State Workers Drive First
Opening Wedges in 139 Years

JUST SQUEEZED THRU

By Joseph A. Loftus

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, June 15.—(INS)—Two opening wedges have been driven into the hitherto invulnerable Blue Laws which for 139 years have rigidly governed Pennsylvania's observance of the Sabbath.

For more than a century the Sunday Statutes grimly saw the state legislature fume and storm biennially over the Sabbath observance issue and always the defenders of the Blue Laws were victors. Repealists, with the adjournment of the 1933 General Assembly, now survey their first fruits of victory.

For 15 weeks a Blue Law modifier ran a checkered hazardous course in the legislature and barely squeezed through with its life to the governor's desk. For another week its fate there was very much in doubt.

Its approval finally by Governor Gifford Pinchot makes it a virtual certainty that Philadelphia and Pittsburgh next summer will have major league baseball on Sunday for the first time in history.

That much is conceded, although the law permits much more extensive modification of the 1794 statutes. Sunday sports are confined to baseball and football, and the extent to which these games will be played in the state will be decided at the election next November.

The local option feature of the Act will maintain the closed Sunday for those cities and towns which vote against modification. The primary effect of the law is to permit a referendum. The voters themselves will decide whether baseball and football shall be legal in their respective communities.

The second wedge permits Sunday concerts. No referendum is necessary for this Act. Programs, however, are restricted to music and any net profit which promoters make must be turned over to the state for public education. In effect, there is no net profit for promoters.

The Sunday music bill was pushed through the legislature without much fuss, although similar efforts in other years were futile. On one occasion, a symphony orchestra presented a concert in the House of Representatives to swing sentiment for the bill, but all to no avail. This time, the Sunday sports bill's success paved the way for legalization of Sunday concerts.

'Phone Company To Issue New Directory

Eastern Montgomery County and Lower Bucks County subscribers of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania will receive next fall a new form of telephone directory containing several improvements, according to C. R. Green, manager.

"The present Eastern Montgomery County and Lower Bucks County telephone books," Mr. Green explained, "are to be enlarged this fall and will contain listings of subscribers living within an approximate 20-mile radius of Philadelphia. This means that subscribers will have a more useful directory containing, in one handy volume, all telephone numbers in Eastern Montgomery County and Lower Bucks County, plus the telephone numbers of subscribers along the Main Line and in Delaware County."

"Each listing will give the house number and the name of the street and community, except in a few distant outlying localities. This improved arrangement will give Eastern Montgomery County and Lower Bucks County subscribers details of listings not available heretofore in their local directories."

"For the first time all business listings for Eastern Montgomery County and Lower Bucks County will be listed in a special classified section to be bound in the back of the directory to be distributed here in the fall. The Philadelphia city listings, in a separate directory, will be furnished as at present."

Rep. Haines Explains Acts of The Assembly

SOUTHAMPTON, June 15.—Addressing a largely attended meeting of the Southampton Chamber of Commerce, in the fire hall, here, Assemblyman W. Albertson Haines gave a clear and concise summary of all the more important legislation passed at the last session of the State body.

One of the more important bills to the average home owner, said Assemblyman Haines, is the one which has enabled the school boards to cut the salaries of the teachers, thus relieving the taxpayer of some of his burdens.

Assemblyman Haines stated that the appropriation for all State-aided hospitals has been raised 10 percent for the next year.

Another bill which is aimed to relieve taxpayers, said Mr. Haines, is the one which appropriates large sums to second class townships for aid in road building.

One of interest to all motorists, he said, is the financial responsibility act which provides that if a driver has had his license revoked or if he has had a judgment of $200 or more entered against him as the result of an accident, he must post an insurance bond to the amount ranging between $5,000 and $10,000 before his license can be restored.

These were only a few of the many numerous acts Assemblyman Haines reviewed in a very interesting manner before the chamber of commerce.

The business session, in charge of the new president, Walter R. Finney, was featured by the appointment of the committee chairmen for the coming year. The speaker of the evening was introduced by Rev. Harold S. Myatt, chairman of the program committee.

The next meeting will take place Tuesday evening, July 11.

ROOSEVELT FACING CRISIS

Washington, D. C., June 15.—President Roosevelt faced his first major crisis in his legislative leadership today as an overwhelming Democratic House showed signs of joining the Senate in revolt against his Veterans' Economic program. The test was to come in the House on the issue of liberalizing slashes in compensation to disabled World War Veterans.

Administration leaders fought desperately to hold the House for the President's plan which would lighten the Veterans' slashes by $100,000,000 a year. There was the danger though, that the House would join the Senate revolt by adopting the Steiwer-cutting plan which liberalizes the slashes by $120,000,000. The President was ready to use his veto power to smash down the congressional rebellion.

The revolt prolonged the session of Congress to the dismay of administration leaders. It served to provide the President's opposition with a forum for comparing his attitude toward the Veterans with his policy on foreign debts.

This contrast was regarded as partially responsible for his defeat in the Senate which voted 51 to 39 for the Steiwer cutting plan. After Republican leaders charged him with trying to "wring" $30,000,000 out of American veterans while accepting a postponement of $69,000,000 debt due from Great Britain there was no holding the Senate. For the first time within memory, the Senate Republicans voted solidly on a controversial issue. They were joined by 19 Democrats who went down into the "valley of the shadow of political death" to stand by their convictions on the Veterans' issue.

Other machines, it is stated, were removed when word spread that the officers were conducting the raid on all gambling devices.

Two machines were confiscated and two arrests made:

Norman Ridge, Trevoise, and John Huscher, Lincoln Inn, were both served with warrants.

Ridge and Huscher appeared this morning before Justice of Peace James Guy in the Bristol Municipal Building, for a hearing in their cases. Each pleaded guilty and paid a fine and costs of $17.50.

Kate Smith Proves Herself An Actress in Film Here

You've heard Kate Smith sing! You know what that voice of hers can do with a song. But at the Grand Theatre this evening, you'll find out something else about Kate Smith. You'll find out that she's an actress.

To be sure, Kate Smith sings in her picture. She sings her familiar and best-loved numbers, "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain," and some catchy, tuneful new ones as well. But she also gives a finely modulated, sincere and moving performance, as a girl from a California farm who sings her way to radio fame and fortune in order to get money enough to fight a power company in its efforts to gain control of her home valley.

The story, simple and homespun, deals entirely with the fight between the power company and the farmers for control of the valley. Kate leads the farmers in their battle, and when all the money of the community has been exhausted in long court proceedings, Kate sells her golden voice to a radio company and carries away to victory.

Leonard Armstrong Hurt In Crash; One Young Man Dies

X-ray pictures have been taken to determine the full extent of injuries sustained by Leonard Armstrong, 23, in an automobile accident at Princeton, N. J., Tuesday evening. The young man, one of four riding in the machine, has his arm broken in two places, cuts upon the face, and possibly internal injuries.

With Mr. Armstrong at the time were two young women and a young man, the party being enroute here to visit at Mr. Armstrong's home. The other young man suffered fatal injuries, death occurring early yesterday morning. Both young women were hurt, but one has been discharged from the hospital. The Bristolian is still in Princeton hospital. He has been employed at Overbrook Hospital, near Newark, N. J.

Although the young folks are unable to state how the crash occurred they believe the car skidded when a tire blew out.

THEIR RANKS NOW THIN

Only a short while now, and G. A. R. encampments will be but a memory.

This sad thought is forced upon consciousness by the fact that only 10 veterans attended the state meeting in Parkersburg several days ago of the West Virginia boys who wore the blue. The ages of these gallant survivors range from 85 to 93, the oldest being Robert W. Jones of Charleston.

The ranks of the blue have dwindled rapidly in the last few years. It was not very long ago that state encampments were attended by thousands. The G. A. R. rolls now show only 77 members in the state of West Virginia. All but 10 of these were prevented by disabilities from attending the Parkersburg meeting.

The loyalty of G. A. R. veterans to their organization has been one of their notable characteristics. Few there were who ever missed an encampment unless prevented by physical disability.

With so few survivors remaining, it seems that they well might consider the advisability of discontinuing their encampments because of the physical strain and attendant dangers placed on those who attend. It is unlikely, though, that as long as two or more are able to travel the meetings will be abandoned.

PROBLEM OF SURPLUS CROPS

Wheat and cotton surpluses are still a cause of worry for the government and of financial troubles for the farmer. In the United States alone there are 300,000,000 too many bushels of wheat and 13,000,000 too many bales of cotton, to which must be added foreign surpluses correspondingly large.

One of the aims of the economic conference is a world agreement for the curtailment of the wheat and cotton crops until the surpluses disappear and prices rise to the point where the cotton and wheat grower can make a decent profit. Another conference attended by representatives from the large wheat and cotton growing countries has been striving for the same thing.

Another move is the lending of $50,000,000 by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Chinese National Government for the purchase of 1,000,000 bales of cotton and from 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 bushels of wheat.

That there may be no surplus crops produced this year in our own wheat and cotton fields the Federal and State departments of agriculture have encouraged the farmers to reduce their acreage in these two crops for their own economic salvation. Growers can largely determine the level of prices in 1934.

We're still waiting for the handlers to reduce the price of a cup of coffee from a dime to a nickel.

At the expenses allowed them the American delegates to the World Economic Conference, at least, will be economic.

The people who made fortunes on the stock market the last few weeks probably learned in 1929 how to lose them.

The fellow who hid in several sheds in May at a sale of unclaimed postal shipments should learn up with Charley Schwab.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

Lovely Joan Hastings lives a secluded life with her two stern, old aunts, Evvie and Babe Van Fleet, in Sausalito, California. She falls in love with Bill Martin, young mechanic. Learning this, Aunt Evvie sends Joan away to Pennsylvania to school. Enroute, Joan slips off the train and goes to Bill's home only to find that he left town without leaving an address. She did not know Bill had gone to see her and Evvie upbraided him, saying if he loved Joan he would give her up and not try to find her as he had nothing to offer her. Joan settles in San Francisco unknown to her aunts. She boards with good-natured Mrs. Maisie Kimmer. Bill, in the meantime, is befriended by Rollo Keyes, wealthy playboy. Rollo's father, believing Bill may have a good influence on his son, gives him a position where he learns surveying. He does not try to get in touch with Joan as he wants to be a success before he goes to her. Bill's mother returns Joan's letters but as she does not know her son's address, Joan believes Bill no longer cares. Maisie's daughter, Francine, de Guity gives Joan a position modeling wedding gowns in her exclusive Maison Francine. She is an instant success. After months of suffering, Joan vows she will not let her love for Bill ruin her life. She concentrates on a successful career and studies designing at night. Mrs. Curtis Barstow, wealthy patron of the Maison Francine asks Joan to tea. Curtis Barstow, the son, arrives home unexpectedly and Joan's hostess is anxious to have her leave. It is obvious she does not care to have her son know Joan, but he insists upon driving her home. Curtis entertains Joan lavishly in the days that follow, but her heart is still with Bill. Unable to stand it any longer, she visits Bill's mother. Mrs. Martin heard from Bill but he did not mention Joan. Joan returns home, her last hope gone, and phones Curtis to take her out.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIII

Where have you been all day?" Curtis asked when Joan stepped into the car beside him. "Mother says you weren't at the shop."

Joan's long lashes swept her cheeks. She felt she could not meet his eyes. "I went to see an old lady across the bay. It was—sort of business."

"Important?" he asked.

"Yes. But it's all finished now. I won't have to go back any more. Oh, Curtis drive fast—take me somewhere out of town for dinner—I'm so tired."

Her fingers curled around his hand. He looked at her compassionately. She was such a child, such an innocent, trusting child. To think of her in the notorious de Guity woman's shop! A pity. A darn pity. Well, he'd see about that. Speak to his mother. She knew everybody. She'd find her something more congenial to do until—until—

"Do you know that I'm awfully fond of you?" he asked suddenly. "I'm awfully fond of you, too," she said shyly.

"Joan how did you ever come to work in that infernal dressmaker's shop? Why, when I saw you that first night, sitting in the dining room in the candlelight I thought you were—well—one of next year's debs. I couldn't get over it when mother said you modeled dresses."

"I had to do something."

"Yes, but you're a thoroughbred, Joan. You show it. Joan you haven't told me a word about your people. Tell me about yours? It's no use that I'm curious—just friendly down."

"I know, Curtis. But there isn't anything to tell."

"What was she saying? What was she making him think? 'I mean—I mean my mother and father are both dead.' her voice broke."

"Poor child—poor little Joan—"

"Don't pity me, or you'll make me cry!" she said tremulously. "Oh I'm saying everything all wrong."

"They've been dead for years and years—that is why I'm crying. I don't know why I am. I'm so tired. I lived with my aunts, and then I—"

"We won't talk about it," he said gently, "if it makes you sad. We'll just drive some more, and then we'll have dinner, and go anywhere you like."

"I don't know what I'd do without you!" she cried suddenly. "You just make up for all the other friends I haven't got!"

"He's so nice!" she told Maisie afterward.

"He's sure attentive," Maisie agreed. "I almost wish he wouldn't send so much candy. I gained seven pounds since you met him. I guess I'll just have that one little piece of pineapple. Pineapple ain't fattening."

"No," Joan murmured absently. "Don't his mother care?" Maisie asked suddenly, with her mouth full of candy.

"But I like to," he smiled. "Can't I, if I like to?"

Square, deep boxes filled with layer after layer of satiny chocolates. Round tin boxes of crystallized ginger and fruits. Long, striped pasteboard boxes from the florist; sturdy stemmed marigolds half hidden by sweet, wet maiden hair fern; lilies of the valley, pale and delicate with flat wide leaves; sturdy tulips; corsage bouquets of costly orchids. Something nearly every day.

"You're a lucky girl," Francine said meaningly.

"Lucky?" A shadow flitted across Joan's face. Lucky! Then she smiled. "I am—aren't I?"

Francine hesitated, started to speak and stopped. "Well, I don't know why I shouldn't tell you," she said at last. "Mrs. Barstow came in and talked to me yesterday—about you. Wanted to know your past!" She chuckled. "The poor simp!"

Joan walked to the window, stood with her back to Francine, looking out. Her hands moved convulsively.

"Why should she?"

"Well, dearie, she might. I see in the papers where she gave a big affair the other night. She didn't invite you—"

Joan flushed. "Why should she? I don't know anyone she knows—"

Maisie chewed on thoughtfully. After a while she said, "He's her only son—"

"But Maisie—he's thirty-one years old. If that isn't old enough—"

"He'll never be old enough, to his mother. Besides he's spoiled her so she ain't reasonable. Well, he'll be a good catch for some girl. I don't know as I ever see a better looking, more refined fellow, but oh my, what a mother-in-law—"

"Maisie—don't be silly!"

"I'm not silly. If ever I see a serious-minded young man, with his mind all made up—"

"Nonsense!" Joan laughed, but her color rose. A little tingle of secret excitement ran down her spine. Somebody liked her. Somebody was beginning to care for her. Someone she could trust. Someone worth while.

"You could do worse," Maisie concluded, "even takin' the mother-in-law into consideration."

"Maisie! I tell you it isn't that kind of an affair. We're just friends."

Maisie sniffed. "I wasn't born yesterday."

Suddenly Joan dropped to her knees beside Maisie's rocking chair and took Maisie's fat hands tight in hers. Her face looked old and strained. "Don't laugh—I'm serious—terribly serious—Maisie, you know how I loved somebody very much. I couldn't ever love anybody else. Do you see? I gave it all—the love I had. So, if you think—that—that—that—"

The fat ringed hands patted her bright hair. "No, I was only fooling you," Maisie lied consolingly.

"He likes you fine, but I wouldn't go and get all upset about nothing. Maybe his mother has some silly notions—but you just never mind."

Joan dragged to a close, and Joan's misgivings were away. He was just a friend—and such a friend! "You shouldn't send me so many things," she said hesitantly.

"But I like to," he smiled. "Can't I, if I like to?"

COLORFUL PAGEANT IS ARRANGED AT LONGWOOD

Bayard Taylor's Historical Novel Will Be Brought To Life

ON JUNE 22, 23 AND 24

On the spacious stage of the Longwood Open Air Theatre in the world-famous Longwood Gardens, home estate of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre S. DuPont, a pageant will be presented in all its colorful glory: the Fox Hunt at the Barts; the Husking Bee at the Fairthorns; the Barn Raising at the Hallows; the capture of Sandy Flash; and many others. Traditions of Chester County, as enlivened by the virile pen of Bayard Taylor, will be revived in this—the most modern of settings, according to Walter N. White, manager of the Travel Bureau of the Automobile Club of Philadelphia, A. A. Bayard Taylor's historical novel, "The Story of Kennett," will be brought to dramatic life in a pageant June 22, 23, and 24, quite appropriately in the old Quaker locality of Kennett Square where the author lived and wrote.

The novel, ranked as a masterpiece of English prose, is rooted in the soil of Chester County. Pioneers who sleep in the cemeteries of Kennett Square stride, scamper and trip through its pages in diaphanous fictional garb. Old residents and those versed in Quaker lore find little trouble in ferreting out the "originals" of Bayard Taylor's characters—Gilbert Potter, Martha Deane, hero and heroine; Betsy Lavender, Deb Smith and the others.

This is not the first pageant produced on this stage by the William H. Fahey Post No. 941, American Legion, which is sponsoring "The Story of Kennett" production. Two years ago the pageant was "A Fantasy of Fairyland"; last year, "Building a Nation," centered around the life of George Washington, 1932 being the Washington Bi-Centennial Year.

Longwood Gardens, long regarded as one of the beauty spots of America, was originally the estate of George Pierce, granted him by William Penn in 1701. The Pierce home was built of brick brought from England in 1730 and still stands, forming the south wing of the Dupont mansion. In 1800 an arboretum was established there and it was as such that Longwood Gardens became famous, flourishing to its present grandeur under the care of the DuPonts.

Lovers of trees will revel in the arboreal beauties of the Gardens. Great white pines, planted in 1800, tower on high. Gigantic hemlocks more than 100 years old bring gasps of awe from the beholder. Ginkgos, cucumber magnolias, English walnuts, black walnuts and Paulonia are as green as they were generations ago. Initials carved on the bark of the copper beeches are silent witnesses of tender romances in the Long Ago. A huge cypress in the center of a large lake arrests the attention of the visitor and the caretaker will tell you that it was brought many, many years ago from the then-styled "Dismal Swamp of Virginia."

The flower gardens are mostly new, dazzling in their seasonal loveliness. There still remains, however, near the mansion, the quaint old flower garden, prompting the visitor to hum unconsciously "It was Just an Old-Fashioned Garden." A touch of the old in the midst of the new... Colonial grandeur surrounded by the handiwork of Twentieth Century horticulturists.

The old mansion—the south wing 203 years old—almost immediately becomes the cynosure of attention, significant of the early days of the colonies and at the same time reflecting the glories of the present.

The new developments have brought the world to the gates of Longwood Gardens—the Electrical Fountains in front of the greenhouses, the Water Gardens and the Open Air Theatre.

The Electrical Fountains have been termed "the most spectacular night display on this continent if not perhaps in the world." Their awe-inspiring beauty baffles the describer.

Occupying an area of about one-eighth of a square mile, the fountains in the vari-colored glow of thousands of electric lights spurt and splash, squirt and spray at the rate of 8,000 gallons of water per minute. Red, blue, green, amber and white lights play on the water to create a sight so beautiful that it must be seen to be appreciated. Round and rectangular basins, oddly shaped pools and tastefully arranged trees and shrubbery add to the splendor.

Near the fountains stands the Chimes Tower, so called because it houses a set of 20 chimes which strike the quarter hour or play a familiar piece of music.

The layout of the Water Gardens was arranged by Mr. DuPont, who took his general plan from the Villa Camerata near Florence, Italy. They form the centerpiece of the electrical fountains.

The Open Air Theatre was built in 1912 and modernized in 1927. The stage is on the site of the old barn, the audience sitting in the erstwhile barnyard. The charm of the theatre is such as to make the beholder find it hard to believe the barn story.

Fountains in the stage floor are controlled from the rear of the audience, lighted through colored glass windows. A water curtain is used to make the change of scenes. The seating capacity has been increased from 2,000 to 2,200. Mr. DuPont recognizing the need for more space following the other Legion pageants.

The Gardens are open every week-day from 8.00 a. m. to 5.00 p. m. Sundays—only the first and third Sundays are the Gardens open—and closed all other Sundays. There is no charge made during week-days, but on open Sundays and holidays, there is a charge, which money distributed to hospitals in Wilmington, Delaware, and West Chester, Pa.

It is suggested that Courier readers leave Bristol via U. S. Route 13, following it until it runs into U. S. Route 1, continuing on U. S. Route 1, the Philadelphia city Belt Line, to Baltimore Pike, passing through Lansdowne, Clifton Heights, Swarthmore, and Media; thence to Concordville, Chadds Ford, and Longwood, here turning right for about half a mile to the gardens.

For the return it is suggested that you return to Longwood, from this point using State Route 42 northward through Lenape to West Chester, following U. S. Route 1 to Llanerch and U. S. 13 into Bristol.

If readers will clip this tour, taking it to the Automobile Club of Philadelphia, they will be given without charge additional information, maps, etc.

PARIS SEES VARIETY GALORE IN FABRICS FOR SUMMER'S WEAR

By Alice Langelier
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS—(INS)—Fine flamenca is one of the fascinating fabrics coming for chic costumes this spring. In red and white it makes a charming checked effect which promises to be very popular for smart race-meetings in June.

Full-fledged fabrics for summer chez Francis run to navy and white prints made up with plain navy, many larger printed designs for afternoon frocks, stopping at the ankle and fantasy fabrics of vegetable fibre for evening, with a sprinkling of the latest broches having a delicate satin design on a mat ground.

Satin laques have been abandoned here for these new broches and brocades or the many dull fabrics which are coming in delightful combinations of black and white, coral and green, and many shades of the blues. A hyacinth-blue broche in pure silk makes a wrapped coat-cape tied on and slashed to reveal a pale beige gown in matching quality beneath.

Some new marocains are to be seen at David's in plaid lines in color on a sheer, fine ground adaptable alike for evening and daytime.

One model is made up with a Rodier linen in natural tone and completely covered by a scarfed coat of the heavy linen.

Patou is featuring a new string-knit jacket, little cape-wraps in lovely colored velvets and summery evening frocks in white-ringed black mouseline, flowered chiffons and mat crepes. They are fitted to the figure in long, slim lines and released only below the knees where the skirt widens slightly.

Chanel goes quite romantic in her lovely organdie creations for hot days. One in white skims the figure with a straight ruffled trim around the neckline, short sleeves and released only below the knees where the skirt widens slightly.

WASP WAIST CRAZE RETURNS AFTER AN ACTRESS STARTS IT

By Alice Langelier
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS—(INS)—The bewitching wasp waist of olden days is wriggling back into the fashion world again and causing the chic corset-makers to bring forth their former tight-laced models.

One of Paris' stage favorites started the wasp waist style for evening and it has spread like magic. New summer evening gowns look smartly stiff and almost doll-like worn over these new-old much-waisted corsets, but naturally it requires the slim and supple form to carry it off properly and they will be a big problem for the woman who has allowed her waistline to grow thick during the days of long waists.

A striking summer evening dress of white pique has the wasp waist and a deep decollete topped off with a pleated shoulder-cape of the same material. On another in white marocain the wasp waist-ends where semi-circular frills begin, superimposed one above the other to match those encircling the armholes and running down the back skirt line.

Patou puts emphasis on the wasp waist of a new white evening gown by way of a vivid broad red pique belt. Red pique gauntlet gloves are worn with it.

Tiny little waists work wonders on fluffy chiffon or stiff organdie frocks. One is lace edged and ties with a huge bow about the slender waistline. It is seen in company of a perfect jewel of a muff.

Silk net features youthful summer evening gowns with wasp-like waists, gowns with full necklines and great bunchy ruffles showing a contrasting color surrounding armholes.

A necklet ruffle is worn to loop over the open back decollete and bracelets of wild flowers are worn on the upper arm.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks pink, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Repeat a selection. Etc. at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

TULLYTOWN NINE WINS FROM LAFAYETTE TEAM THREE TILTS BOOKED FOR CO. LEAGUE TONIGHT

The Tullytown nine won its third game of the week last night in a fast contest with La Fayette of Bristol, the final score being 6-4. Even with the loss of Summers, Clay and P. Sullivan, Tullytown put up a game fight and won the game in the last inning.

The contest promised to be a tie for the first four innings with the score 2-2. The first of the fifth brought in two runs for La Fayette. At the end of the seventh inning with two men on and two outs, Monti cracked out a single and with an overthrow to third, the two wanted runs came in. Due to a sore arm, Sullivan retired at the fourth inning and Carmen took his place, striking out four men. Lineberry, substituting for Clay as catcher, was relieved by Appleton when a foul ball smashed his finger.

Tomorrow evening the Tullytown team battles with the fast King's Farm outfit. King's Farm and Starkey Farms have joined forces, and to all accounts Tullytown expects to have a hard fight.

The line-up for both teams was as follows:

Tullytown	La Fayette
Monti	first base
Quinn	second base
Carmen	third base
Lineberry	catcher
Sullivan	pitcher
Lucisano	shortstop
Appleton	center field
Frazer	right field

Three games are booked in the Lower Bucks League tonight. Hulmeville comes to Bristol to play the A. O. H. team. Parkland will play the Odd Fellows at Emille. Bristol A. A. goes to Langhorne.

Each of these tilts is important, because if the Hulmeville team beats the Hibernians it will mean that the first half race will be a free-for-all with all teams participating. A victory for Mulholland's nine will advance that club to third position which will be the highest position the A's have held this season. A win for either Parkland or the Odd Fellows pushes the losers into the cellar.

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE

ST. ANN'S at EDGELY
(Edgely Field)

The Jefferson A. C. was no match for the Edgely team on St. Ann's field last night as the visitors rolled up an easy 13-2 win to clinch third place in the Bristol Twilight League.

The Edgelyites started to hit from the first inning on, and never relaxed. They made a total of fourteen hits off Brooks and Hart, the Mules' hurlers. Thirteen of the blows were singles, while the other was a double.

"Sid" Purcell was the leader of the hitters with four singles in five trips to the plate. Sid, still nursing a neck injury, drove in six of the invaders' tallies and crossed the plate once himself to be responsible for seven tallies.

Six runs in the fifth inning after the Bristol club had rallied to score two runs and also fill the bases, put the tilt on ice for the Edgely nine.

"Johnny" Harmsen twirled the full fray for the winners and gave the Jeffersons four hits, three of which were scratch. The only time he was in danger of being beaten was in the fourth, when the losers pushed over two runs and filled the bags with but one out. He retired the side without any further counting.

Set for Fifty-Fourth Varsity Rowing Classic

Here are the representative sons of John Harvard and Old Eli who will match stamina and skill for the honor of their respective Alma Mater in the fifty-fourth annual rowing classic between the varsity eights of Harvard and Yale on the Thames River, New London, Conn., on June 16.

Of the 53 previous contests between Crimson and Blue, Yale has captured 32 victories and Harvard 21. This year the Crimson is confident of cutting down the Yale lead by one, while the Blue is equally determined to swell the list of victories to 33.

Most significant about the enactment of the Sunday sports law was the fact that gubernatorial approval came from a man who has always staked his political fortunes with the element most bitterly opposed to any modification of the old Blue Laws—the rural and church groups.

A dry, and a staunch foe of the saloon, the militant, independent Governor Pinchot has always counted the Grange and other country folk as his mainstay.

Never before had a Blue Law modifier reached the desk of a Pennsylvania governor. Its passage this year—without a vote to spare in the Senate—was politically embarrassing. Although he cannot succeed himself as governor, Pinchot is not done with politics. He is at war with the regular Republican organization, a powerful force with whom he has jostled more or less successfully for a dozen years. The regulars were in the majority in both branches of the legislature.

The local option feature of the bill made it as mild perhaps as any that could be conceived, and so, with the significant remark that "it is a long time since it was illegal for a man to kiss his wife on Sunday" he signed it.

He is still facing the denunciation of church groups. They have termed him a "political opportunist," this in spite of his comment in signing the bill: "I have been warned that this will be politically expensive for me. Probably that is true."

Just as peculiar about the whole situation was Pinchot's veto of another Sunday law modifier. He turned down a bill which would have permitted Sabbath fishing only in the Delaware river, with the angling confined to one rod and two hooks. The governor himself is an ardent devotee of the same sport.

"It would be against the traditions of the state," he commented.

A Traditional Crew Classic

By BURNLEY

ED LEADER—
THE YALE SPHINX
SENDS HIS GREAT
SATURDAY!

THE HARVARD CREW'S
SUPERIOR WEIGHT MAY
TELL OVER THE LONG
FOUR MILE ROUTE!

WHITESIDE
HAS SCHOOLED
THE CRIMSON
OARSMEN
STROKE!

AT New London, Conn., this Saturday, the silent and taciturn Ed Leader, crew master at Yale, sends his Blue oarsmen against the Harvard crew, their traditional rival.

This annual classic will be over the four-mile distance—a real rowing marathon. Yale's great crew have already definitely established themselves as sprint champions of the Eastern seaboard, but over the long route it may be another story.

Charley Whiteside's Crimson crew will enjoy a distinct weight advantage over the talented Eli eight in the coming race, and this may well be an important factor in the contest. Of course, rowing form will usually discount bulk, even in a distance race, but if other things are equal the bigger crew usually wins at four miles.

An interesting angle to the impending race is that Whiteside has been studying Leader's coaching methods, and has trained his Harvard crew so expertly in the Leader stroke that only the most critical eye will be able to discern any difference between the stroking styles of the two crews when they meet at New London.

In the past, Harvard has usually had the advantage in man power, but this has been nullified by the superior rowing form of the Leader-coached Yale oarsmen. If Whiteside has really managed to drill his Harvard giants in the methods of the Seattle master, Yale is not to be beaten over the long race this year, for man power is decisive when rowing form is approximately equal.

The question is whether Whiteside can teach the Leader stroke to master himself. After all, though the Harvard mentor is a cunning coach, it must be remembered that Ed Leader is a genius. The Yale sphinx is not only one of the most brilliant students of rowing form in crew history; he is also matchless as a teacher of rowing. Leader's teaching genius is attested by the startling fact that the members of the Yale faculty club voted him the best teacher in the university—a truly remarkable tribute, especially when you remember the average professor's distaste for athletics.

Leader knows his subject—rowing—thoroughly, and knows how to impart his knowledge to impressionable youngsters. He is an iron-handed dictator in the boathouse, and stands for no foolishness from meddling old grads. His gruff, reserved attitude, in fact, has gained him a reputation for testiness.

Leader is a hard man to interview, and is rarely affable to strangers. His mind seems always to be on the one subject of rowing, and he wants to be left alone with his thoughts.

An unusual personality, this Ed Leader, a truly great rowing coach.

Da Pream a Mighty Man Is He
